

Mako Kusagaya (Japan)

The biography of each musician is published as it has been sent by its author

Mako Kusagaya was born in Tokio, Japan.

Her outstanding talent for organ playing was already discovered during her childhood.

First Mako Kusagaya studied at the Musashino-School of Music in Tokio.

Further studies followed at the State School for Music and Performing Arts in Stuttgart, Germany.

Thereafter she completed her degree for Church Music and Concert Organist at the University of Arts in Berlin, Germany.

With her impressing, fast and virtuous playing this musician has attained her own audience which enthusiastically follows every performance.

Critics repeatedly write that Johann Sebastian Bach would have been delighted of her temperamental and uninhibited performances.

Mako Kusagaya has recorded an Organ-CD in the Johann-Sebastian-Bach-Church in Arnstadt, Germany and in the St.-Matthias-Church in Berlin.

Mako Kusagaya is regularly in concert throughout the world and she also gives lectures about the organ and organ playing in Germany, Japan and different other countries.
